

David Britten

Occupational Background: I have been a secondary school teacher for 15 years, in a number of schools in Northamptonshire, Kent and South East London. My main teaching subject is Geography; however, I have held various roles including Head of Year and Designated Child Protection Officer and now my current post is Head of Department and More Able Coordinator for the whole school. I have taught all secondary school ages, from Years 7 to 13 and have led on both GCSE groups and A Levels groups through national examinations. I thoroughly enjoy working with secondary school students and preparing them for life after school. I feel that I can apply these skills and insights by supporting students at Sutton-At-Hone Primary School, who are at the beginning of their education.

Special Interest Areas: Teaching and Learning, More Able Students, Humanities.

About me: I was born and raised in Northampton but moved to Kent to go to University. Whilst studying, I met my wife Laura who is a primary school teacher, and then settled in the Dartford area. I now live in Sutton-at-Hone with my wife and two daughters. My eldest daughter currently attends Sutton-at-Hone Primary School and my youngest will hopefully attend in the future. As education is an important part of my life, I felt very strongly about supporting my two daughters in their own education as much as possible. The chance of becoming a governor has enabled me to step in to a privileged role within our local school, as well as offering any support I can through my own career experiences.
